ABANDONED SHIP IS FOUND AT SEA

Annie B. Parker Has Sails Set and Hoid Filled With Fish But Crew Is Gone.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 5.—The faded yellow pages of the log-books of the New Bedford whaling fleet fall to record a mystery at sea more baffling than that presented Wednesday when the revenue cutter Gresham towed into port the Gloucester fishing schooner Annie M. Parker, which was picked up Monday with all sails set, her hold filled with fish and without a soul on board, 60 miles east of the Nantucket lightship. There is no trace of any of the 19 men composing the schooner's crew.

In its details the mystery recalls the case of the Boston brig Marie Celeste, which was found abandoned at sea some 40 years ago. The fate of her crew was never known.

The British steamer Astrakhan, bound from New York for France, sighted the Parker Monday, drifting with all sails set. Boarding the schooner officers of the steamer found four of the dories missing. A few burned pieces of bread were all the food in the galley, indicating that before leaving the crew had hastily gathered together, a supply of provisions.

The schooner was not leaking and was in perfect condition, except for the loss of one jib. Salt fish, valued at about $8,000, filled the hold.

A prize crew from the Astrakhan took charge of the Parker, and turned her over to the Gresham.

From the owners of the Parker, it was learned that she sailed from Quincy, N. S., for her home port on Oct. 26 after a fishing trip to the New Foundland grand banks. She was in command of Capt. Vincent, a veteran Gloucester skipper, and was manned by a crew of 19 men. The owners could offer no explanation of the abandonment. There is a possibility that the Parker's crew was picked up by some sailing vessel. Had they been taken on board a steamer the rescue probably would have been reported by wireless.

MYSTERY EXPLAINED.
PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 6.—The probable loss of their captain Vincent Nelson, and three of their mates and the death of one, form part of a tale of the sea brought here Wednesday night by the survivors of the crew of the Gloucester fisherman Annie M. Parker. The fact that their abandonment of the stranded schooner near Nantucket and the loss of life was unnecessary, was not known to the crew on the way reached them Wednesday night that the schooner was in port at New Bedford, practically undamaged.

Nine survivors of the Parker's crew reached here aboard the lumber schooner Tifton from Jacksonville, which had picked them up from dories, thirty miles off Nantucket Sunday morning after they had been afloat 24 hours without food or drink.

Reuben Kenney, the cook, was drowned when he was swept overboard from a dory while his mates looked on powerless to help. His home was at Glenwood, N. S. He leaves seven children. The missing men besides Capt. Nelson, are: Lester Fletcher of Argyle Sound, N. S.; Ross Worthen of Pulaski Head, N. S.; and Thomas Landry of Arichat, C. B.

The Annie M. Parker, bound home from the fishing grounds and carried off her course by adverse winds, went aground on Rose and Crown shoal off the Nantucket coast early Saturday morning. The vessel was cracked by the waves and the crew agreed with Capt. Nelson that hope for safety lay in getting clear of their craft. So they abandoned her.
